Quigley Principal and Teachers Sacrifice their Locks for Charity

To motivate students in a Relay for Life fundraising campaign, three brave people at Quigley Elementary were willing to sacrifice their hair! Teacher Blair Murray offered to shave his head if students reached a fundraising goal of $300 and John Prescott upped the ante by offering to do the same at the $500 mark.

When Blair asked the student and staff audience who would be willing to have their head shaved for $1,000, the crowd shouted "Mr. Stewart". Principal Bruce Stewart good-naturedly agreed. So far, his students have raised $1,400 and understandably, he is feeling a combination of pride and dread!

This head shaving event is a first for Quigley Elementary and a first for Principal Stewart who hopes he won't be sporting the trendy hair style again anytime soon.
