Dear Sir/Madam,

Please accept this message as support for Amy Geistlinger who is being called out for a personal decision not to be included in a photo with Tyson Cook, who was being celebrated for his drag queen efforts within SD23.

We need to respect everyones personal convictions, in the same way we respect everyones personal choices on how we dress and conduct ourselves.

I find it hypocritical that someone who expects and demands to be accepted in our society, takes offence with another's personal convictions. We all have the right to choose who we support and admire.

Amy did nothing more than choose not to be in a photograph. The media jumped on a story that shows the world we are currently living in has changed, and the personal choices we make are being guided by politics and a culture of over-sensitive, pathetic, attention seeking idiots.

Regards,

Simon Walter
